SET REFUELING ENDURANCE FLIGHT RECORD

NEW MARK SET BY THE CITY OF CLEVELAND TODAY

RECORD OF 174 HOURS, 59 SECONDS SUCCEEDS MARK OF 172 HOURS, 32 SECONDS

CROWD OF 100,000 GREETED CO-PILOTS MITCHELL AND NEWCOMB AT AIRPORT
By CLAIRE M. BURCKY
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Cleveland, Ohio, July 6.—A new world's refueling endurance flight record today crowned the efforts of Byron K. Newcomb and Roy L. Mitchell, co-pilots of the endurance ship "City of Cleveland."

They established a sustained flying time of 174 hours and 59 seconds, eclipsing the former mark of 172 hours and 32 minutes made by Reb Robbins and Jim Kelly, Texas cowboys. The "City of Cleveland" landed at 12:39:50 A. M. today, after having been aloft since 6:38:51 P. M. Friday, June 28.

"We busted the record so we came down."

As they made that statement the ex-army fliers were surrounded by a shouting, howling, whistling mob of 100,000 persons. Police fought the crowd back to enable the plane to taxi to the Stewart Aircraft Corporation hangar. It moved slowly and souvenir hunters practically stripped it of all fables.

As the tired aviators stepped to the ground they were raised up on stalwart shoulders. Police cleared a way to the hangar entrance. Through it sped Mrs. Mitchell and Mrs. Newcomb. "Billie!" shouted Newcomb, crushing his wife in his arms and smothering her with kisses.

Too hoarse to utter a sound, Mitchell just folded his wife to him and kissed her.

The wives were speechless. Tears of happiness streamed through their smiles. From out of the swarm that hemmed the fliers in the little room a small boy pushed his way.

"Glad to see you, dad," the youngster said to Mitchell, his step-father. "Gee, but I'm proud of you."

"The boy ran his hand over Mitchell's face, grown stubbled with whiskers during eight days in the air."

A radio microphone was set in front of Newcomb. He was asked to say something to his invisible audience.

"Glad to be back, folks, after breaking the record," Newcomb said. "Our motor worked perfectly to the end. It wore us out. Good night."

Both pilots declared they were completely exhausted by the flight. They said the machine was in perfect shape but they were too tired to go on. The storm of Thursday night sapped the last bit of strength the fliers had in them, Newcomb declared.

"The rain beat down and lightning flashed. It was the worst flying weather I ever was in. God only knows where we were flying that night. Riding through that storm knocked the last bit of strength we had. We were soaking wet and cold next morning and flew all day yesterday on the last reserve we had."

The barograph recording the length of the flight was turned over to Floyd J. Logan, Ohio governor of the National Aeronautical Association, who will forward it to Washington to receive official recognition.

Culver City, Calif., July 6.—California's endurance fliers, Loren Mandell and Pete Reinhardt, were shooting at a new record today as they entered their fifth consecutive day in the air.

The pilots, as they passed over here last night, asked that their congratulations be wired to Byron K. Newcomb and Roy L. Mitchell who stayed aloft 174 hours, 5 minutes and 59 seconds at Cleveland.

A tiny radio had brought them the news of the new record as officials of the Culver City airport were planning to send the word up via their refueling plane.

At 9:30 A. M. today Mandell and Reinhardt had been in continuous flight in their Buhl Air Sedan for 96 hours. Notes dropped to the field at that time indicated their motor was functioning in a good fashion and that the fliers were in good spirits.

The ship was refueled for the fifteenth time shortly after it started on its fifth day in the air.

Mandell and Reinhardt took off from the Culver City airport last Tuesday at 7:30 A. M.

* IF 'SCHOOLMARM'S' WANT TO SMOKE, IT'S THEIR BUSINESS *

Chicago, July 6.—(U.P.)—If the "schoolmarm's" want to smoke, that's their business, the American Federation of Teachers decided in the closing session of its annual convention.

Bobbed hair, dancing, card-playing and getting married also are permissible, the delegates insisted. "There is no reason," said resolutions they adopted, "why teachers should be subjected to restrictions in their personal lives, not imposed upon women in other professions. They should not be kept in constant fear of losing their jobs because school boards frown upon their modes of dress and living."

High salaries and a universal teachers' pension system were urged. President Hoover was commended for his disarmament policy, and abolition of military training in public schools was asked.

LEGGE IS MAN OF DEEDS AND NOT OF WORDS

SELECTED BY PRES. HOOVER TO SUPERVISE WORK OF FED-ERAL FARM BOARD

TO AMERICAN FARMER APPOINT-TEE MAY BE "THE MAN OF THE HOUR"

By DON CHAMBERLAIN
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Chicago, July 6.—A man of "deeds, not words" is Alexander Legge, selected by President Hoover to supervise the work of the newly created federal farm board in the expenditure of half a billion dollars for stabilizing of the agricultural industry.

To the American farmer, Legge may be "the man of the hour" but to one who seeks his attitude on the farm question or other subjects, he is a "man of silence." It is only by his accomplishments, not his sayings, that he may be known.

Legge, a tall, broad shouldered and long legged man, of ruddy complexion and clean shaven, who is 65 years old but looks 50, is interview shy and as much as the sphinx.

Always glad to meet a reporter, he folds up completely as far as being quoted in the public prints is concerned.

His photograph is a rare thing in a newspaper morgue. At the offices of the International Harvester Company, over whose annual quarter of a billion dollar business he presides, many requests for pictures and stories of Legge are received. But the answer to all is a firm "no."

When Legge takes over the helm of the farm board he will be abandoning a post which pays him $100,000 a year to accept one for $12,000 a year. His friends say he has a fine sense of public duty but it must also be something of his love for the farm which induced him to accept the farm board post.

The farm, they say, is his only hobby. Whenever possible, they declare, he will go to Hinsdale, near here, where in 1927 he established the Katherine Legge memorial, a 53-acre tract of farmland, for the benefit of women employees of the Harvester Co. in memory of his wife who died in 1924, and actually dug into the soil.

Post holes, plowing or whatever it may be, he takes keen enjoyment out of it.

"He is happiest doing something connected with the soil," a friend said. The story of the farm is no new thing to Legge.

He was born on a farm in Dane county, Wis. in 1866, moved to Nebraska in 1881 where he worked on a farm until 1891, and then took a job as collector for the Harvester Company.

TWO ARMED BANDITS STEAL $1,200 PAYROLL

Camden, N. J., July 6.—(U.P.)—Two armed bandits concealed on the second floor of a building today robbed Louis Seitchik, manager of the True Line Coast company, of a $1,200 payroll.

FLIGHT TO ROME DELAYED BECAUSE OF ROUGH BEACH

Old Orchard, Me., July 6.—(U.P.)—The departure of the monoplane Pathfinder on its projected 4800-mile flight to Rome, scheduled for this morning, was postponed early today because of the rough condition of the beach.

Pilot Roger C. Williams and his navigator, Lewis A. Yancey, said there was a bare possibility that they might start this afternoon.

Farm Cooperative Organizations Preparing to Cooperate With Administration In Plans

TO WORK OUT WIDE PROGRAM OF FARM RELIEF

CO-OPERATIVES DO AN ANNUAL BUSINESS OF ABOUT HALF BILLION

HANDLING THE FARM PRODUCTS
WITH PROFIT TO FARMERS AND THEMSELVES
By CECIL OWEN
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, July 6.—Farm co-operative organizations doing an aggregate annual business of about $500,000,000 are prepared to co-operate with the administration in its farm relief program, it was learned at the agriculture department today.

Co-operative farm organizations in all parts of the country are now handling farm products on an extensive scale with profit to farmers and themselves. More than 150 farmers' co-operatives are now doing an annual business exceeding $1,000,000, two have passed the $80,000,000 mark and five or six have an annual business approximating $50,000,000 each, the department said. In addition there are many smaller co-operatives.

Success of the administration's farm program was declared by Secretary Hyde in an address last week to depend primarily on the co-operation given the federal farm board by these existing co-operative groups. In the aggregate, the influence wielded by the large scale co-operatives determines the attitude agriculture adopts toward new legislative proposals.

"This remarkable development of large scale co-operatives appears, when we recall that only about one-third of our farmers are members of co-operative associations, as a very striking proof that magnitude of businesses," the department said.

Existing co-operative organizations are expected to play a leading role in formulating, with the aid of the farm board soon to be established by President Hoover, the future agricultural policies of the United States.

Jackson, Mich., July 6.—Secretary of Agriculture Arthur M. Hyde declared here last night that a conference between him and W. F. Schilling of Northfield, Minn., had no bearing on the latter's candidacy for a position on the federal farm board. Secretary Hyde said the two were old friends and met here on the occasion of the republican party's diamond jubilee as such.

St. Paul, July 6.—Minnesota still has a chance of representation on the new federal farm board, state agricultural leaders declared here today, despite the failure of Secretary of Agriculture Hyde to offer a position on the organization to W. F. Schilling of Northfield in their meeting late Friday at Jackson, Michigan.

It is evident, the farm leaders point out, President Hoover desires a Minnesota dairyman on the board since he once offered the post to W. S. Moscript of Lake Elmo, a fellow officer of Schilling in the Twin City Milk Producers Association.

Although Moscript declined the president's offer and was asked to reconsider his refusal, one other dairy leader—John Brandt, president of the Land O' Lakes Creameries—still is a possibility.

Brandt was endorsed for the post by

CASE OF WOOING BUT NOT WEDDING GOES TO JURY

ANN LIVINGSTON IS PLAINTIFF
IN $250,000 BREACH OF PROMISE SUIT

AGED MILLIONAIRE CONTENTS
SHE IS BUT A "GOLD DIGGER"

Chicago, July 6.—(U.P.)—Ann Livingston, who was wooed but not wed by Franklyn S. Harding, millionaire manufacturer, expected to know before tonight to what extent, in dollars, the jury in her $250,000 breach of promise suit, believes that she is a "poor but good little working girl" and not a "gold digger" as her elderly admirer contends.

The extended legal battle between attorneys for the pretty young plaintiff, formerly a Tulsa stenographer, and the 62-year-old oil burner manufacturer, has lasted for two weeks during which the mobs of spectators necessitated employment of extra court attaches to maintain order.

Both sides rested late yesterday after the defense had introduced several new "surprise" witnesses in an attempt to prove their contention that it was Harding's money and not his love that she sought.

Duluth Airplane Service, School Moves to St. Paul

St. Paul, July 6.—(U.P.)—The Sergeant flying service and the Sergeant school of aeronautics, of Duluth, have been purchased by the Great Northern Aviation corporation, Mark Hurd, president of the latter organization, announced here today. Executive offices will be moved to St. Paul but Roger Sergeant will be retained as general manager of the new acquisition with offices in Duluth.

many of his friends and was generally considered as an acceptable alternate for Moscript or Schilling.

Further light on the entire situation was expected to be shed by Schilling on his return from Jackson.

BOLD MARINERS

Henry Schnittger, Konrad Kubatko, Rudy Bantle, Arlor Sowers and Joseph Leppich (left to right), five Toledo, O., youths who plan to attempt a journey to Europe in a twenty-six-foot home-made motor boat. They will start from a dock in Toledo, through inland waterways to the St. Lawrence river and out into the Atlantic.

5,000 STRIKERS FIRE 7 STREET CARS IN BARN

REPEL FIREMEN AND POLICE
WITH BRICKBATS AND CLUBS
AT NEW ORLEANS

SYMPATHIZERS HURL STICK OF
DYNAMITE INTO POLAND
CAR BARN

New Orleans, La., July 6.—(U.P.)—A mob of 5,000 striking car men sympathizers fired seven street cars in the canal barns today and then repelled firemen and police with bricks and clubs allowing the street cars to be consumed.

While firemen and police were attempting to approach the fire at the canal barn, a stick of dynamite was hurled into the Poland car barns. The dynamite blast did little damage.

Police attempted to disperse the crowd with tear bombs, but were unsuccessful.

Burning of the cars followed a night of rioting in which desperate efforts were made to reach strikebreakers entrenched in the car barns.

The strikebreakers were lined up with revolvers ready to shoot. The governor, it was hinted in official circles, would be asked to declare martial law today.

The public service company determined not to give in to the demands of the strikers for more pay and shorter working days.

The restraining order followed clashes which resulted in the deaths of Joseph Molinaro, 68-year-old car washer, and Sylvian Thibodeaux. Both men were strikers.

Three policemen have turned in their badges, declaring they would not use their guns against "dry" friends. Hundreds of persons, many of them not in any way involved in the dispute, have been injured by bricks, clubs and revolvers used in the rioting.

Battered street cars, the debris of cars destroyed by fire, and bricks, timbers and stones littering the vicinity of the car barns gave evidence of the prevalent mob spirit.

Attempts to operate street cars and busses with non-union men, officials of the New Orleans Public Service Company, would be "discontinued" for the time being, at least. They did not plan to attempt to bring in additional strikebreakers now, the statement said.

Motor Company Head is Arrested on Forgery Charge

Minneapolis, July 6.—(U.P.)—Lester Mortund, president of the motor company here which bears his name, was arrested today on a second degree forgery charge. He was accused of having forged the name of a bank clerk to a $2,700 contract. It was alleged Mortund had made speculations which amounted to about $29,000.

ALCOHOLISM CAUSED DEATH OF YOUTH

Little Falls, July 6.—(U.P.)—Alcoholism caused the death of Sigmund Galazik, 21-year-old farm youth, whose body was found in a parked automobile near here Thursday night. Coroner E. L. Fortier declared today following an autopsy.

NONE TOO STURDY

This is the twenty-six-foot home-made motor boat in which five Toledo youths will attempt to journey to Europe. They will sail from their home town, through inland waterways to the St. Lawrence and out into the Atlantic.

* 'BRIDGE WIDOWER' IS 'WORLD'S MOST PATIENT HUSBAND' *

Chicago, July 6.—(U.P.)—James Breen, "bridge widower," is the "world's most patient husband," Judge William N. Gemmill believes.

"My wife is bridge crazy," said James when Mrs. Marie Breen demanded alimony. "In the seven years we were married, we separated eleven times—always over a bridge argument."

"I had to mind our two children every night while she played. To make matters worse, her partner, Mrs. Jeannett Pond, finally brought over her two youngsters and I had to look after them, too."

"Both women stayed out until 4 and 5 in the morning. When I protested, my wife told me I was only a husband, but that bridge was bridge."

"Enough," declared the court, "I wish I could give you a medal as the world's most patient husband." Mrs. Breen must do without her alimony.

CRIMINAL ACTION FOLLOWS AGAINST FOUR DRY AGENTS

LATTER CHARGED WITH KILL-ING 2 FARMERS ON RAID OF FARM HOUSE

NUMEROUS RESOLUTIONS CON-DEMN RAIDERS' ACTION AT TUCUMSEH, OKLA.

Tecumseh, Okla., July 6.—(U.P.)—Criminal action against four "dry" agents, who killed Oscar Lowery and James Harris in a raid on a farm house near here Thursday, was spurred today by numerous resolutions condemning that action of the raiders.

The Oklahoma City American Legion Post and groups of Tecumseh citizens and farmers refused to accept the statements of the prohibition agents that the shootings were committed in self defense and passed resolutions upholding the slain men as innocent of prohibition violation and condemning the killings as "unjust."

The four members of the raiding party, W. W. Thomason, veteran federal agent, Jeff Harris, John D. Williams and Tom Little, were charged with first degree murder by County Attorney Randall Pitman.

The murder charges were based on the deathbed statement of James Harris who told officers that he and Lowery, believing the raiders were robbers, had appeared with a gun to defend themselves but had obeyed orders to drop it when they were fired upon by Jeff Harris.

First degree murder charges were filed today against Harris. The others probably will not be charged in Lowery's death as investigation has revealed that other members of the raiding party had not arrived at the house when Lowery was shot, County Attorney Randall Pitman said.

MOST SEVERE STORM IN DECADES KILLS MANY PEOPLE

MOST OF SOUTHERN FRANCE IS AFFECTED BY THE

IN TOWN OF PLATTING,
BAVARIA

Berlin, July 6.—(U.P.)—The most severe storm which has visited Europe in nearly two decades was abating today after many persons had been killed by the lightning, hailstones and cyclonic winds.

The hurricane swept across many central European countries, including Czechoslovakia, Switzerland, Germany, Hungary and Austria. The full extent of the damage is not yet known.

At the town of Plattling in Bavaria hardly a house was left undamaged. In Vienna winds were so powerful that the street cars found difficulty in moving through the streets.

Paris, July 6.—Relief parties were dispatched today to aid the victims of the most devastating electrical storm which has struck southern France in decades and which took a toll of seven lives and great property destruction in the ravaged zone.

Most of southern France was affected by the disaster, but the Pyrenees district suffered the full force. Fruit and wheat crops were ruined, many animals perished and the streets of several towns were inundated by cloudbursts.

Dispatches from Charolles stated that the municipal councillor was killed by the lightning, which damaged or shattered 100 tombstones. Near Perigeux the lightning killed a farmer and a young girl who was arranging the table for the evening meal.

In the Limoges district a terrible hailstorm added to the heavy losses of the community, ruining the vegetable and fruit crops and inflicting other great property losses.

The gendarmes helped the inhabitants of many towns to evacuate houses which were on the verge of collapse. The victims were forced to seek refuge in the stronger buildings of the towns.

Prague, July 6.—Six persons were killed in the disastrous storm which swept Czechoslovakia during the last 24 hours. Five were killed near Pardubitz by lightning, falling stones and uprooted trees. One was killed in Prague. Many persons suffered injuries. The hurricane did great damage to crops and other property.

HARRY F. SINCLAIR OBSERVES BIRTHDAY ANNIVERSARY IN JAIL

Washington, July 6.—(U.P.)—Harry F. Sinclair, multimillionaire oil man, observed his 53rd birthday in the district jail today.

Jail attaches refused to reveal whether Sinclair had received any greetings from friends or any presents.

SWEDISH SINGERS MEET HERE IN 1930

Brainerd Selected as Convention City of Northwest Division of Swedish Singers

GLEE CLUB RETURNS

Render Concert at Fourth of July Celebration at Akeley

The Brainerd Swedish Glee club, E. O. Anderson, director, returned home last evening from Akeley where they rendered a concert at the Fourth of July celebration at that city last evening.

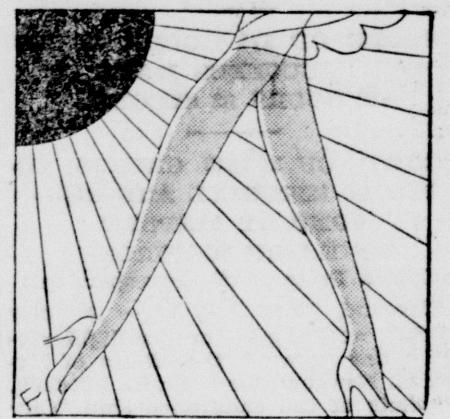

The Glee club opened their program with a group of patriotic songs. Mr. Jernberg gave a number of his humorous songs, which were especially pleasing to the audience; Kenneth Brackner gave two violin selections, and Miss Georgia Drexler, soloist, rendered the "Italian Street Song" accompanied by the club. Hearty applause was given each number rendered.

Word was also received that Brainerd has been chosen for the 1930 convention of Northwest division of Swedish singers. The 1929 convention was held a few weeks ago at Duluth. This is considered an asset to Brainerd, and will be a great opportunity to hear these singers. It is also expected one of the Brainerd Glee club singers will be in Sweden next year for the meeting there.

Olsen-Ofstad
Miss Ellen Ofstad and Nels Olsen, of Sylvan, were united in marriage yesterday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock, Judge J. H. Warner officiating. The attendants were Laura Rose and Nellie Nyquist.

The Back Door looks a little neglected, doesn't it? For one thing, the screening has rusted and fallen away in spots. Doesn't keep the flies out. And the delivery boys and the ice man have soiled the woodwork. It does look messy. It isn't much of a job to put in new netting and to paint the main door and the frame of the other. Let's get busy. ## Dame Fashion Smiles

By Grace Jewett Austin

Dame Fashion heard a graphic account lately of how a "movie" star can order herself a hand-made peasant-embroidered coat. She enters the shop, gazes, takes a fancy, says "Make me one, a trifle longer, and do not take measurements, for I will send down a perfectly fitting coat." So her maid appears with a coat, the new one is completed and dispatched to its owner, the bill is paid, and the transaction is over.

Here is the drama that takes place for most of the millions of the rest of us, who are not "movie" stars: We ponder our wardrobe to decide if a garment of a certain kind is really a necessity at this time, we do quite a bit of window-shopping, we study advertisements and fashion magazines, we try on different models and possibly dislocate our necks trying to see if back seams go right and the whole thing is becoming.

But what a lot of comfort we do take with a garment when we at last have it in our possession! And we can imagine that the "movie" star may say, months later, "What is that garment in wardrobe trunk 17? Oh, yes—that coat which I ordered one day." So there are certainly compensations in being just regulation bread-and-butter people.

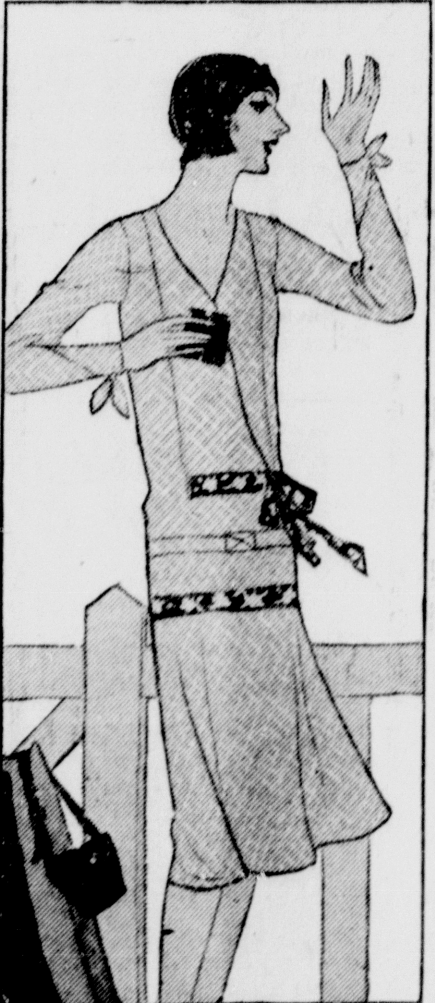

Isn't it fun to watch for the straws that float along on the river of fashion? Dame Fashion thought she saw a straw the other day. The little close-fitting cap hats, with a clipped bob, sometimes seem to have a lack which one does not know precisely how to fill, at the back lower edge. Paris has the ingenious suggestion in the spring that one might sew in a row of little curls of false hair, but it is doubtful whether that plan has gained many to follow it. But one such hat was seen with a row of dainty little roses at the lower edge of the back—and presto, such an air of completeness was gained at once.

"Ensemble"—that word is on every woman's tongue this season—and sometimes mispronounced, according to Mr. Webster, who says it should be "an-sun-bl." He says, moreover, that it means "the whole, all parts taken together," adding, "specifically, of a group of musicians." So a true "ensemble" is a harmony, not only of coat and dress, to represent the body of stringed instruments, but combining as the further definition says, "all the instruments." It will bring in pretty shoes for "bass," just right hat for oboe, which you know sets the keynote for the whole orchestra, with beads and jewels for the high notes of the flute and cornet. But what, oh, what will represent the drum?

Speaking of jewels reminds that Paris lately sent out a suggestion that in picking out a velvet evening wrap, a flower or jewel shade should be chosen. But since a black velvet coat is so universally becoming, Dame Fashion would remind that sometimes coal is called "black diamond."

How Border Is Utilized in Making Vest Dress

Paris cuts the skirt to flare, says the Woman's Home Companion. Straight edges of the border go elsewhere. It is the mode and it is economical. Silk 40 inches wide and bordered on one side cuts smartly and to advantage with upper straight and skirt circular. The frock illustrated uses the extra length of border for a bow. The gray and white bias blocks of the printed silk have an effect that is pleasing. The border, a black ribbon-like band printed with yellow flowers, makes a bold contrast that goes with the youthful line of the dress.

Crepe de Chine Makes Charming Town Costume

A winsome town costume is made of Richelieu red crepe de chine, and a new note is to be seen in the wide hemstitching of the shade on the collar, cuffs and handkerchief.

On Rearing Children from CRIB to COLLEGE

Compiled by the Editors of "CHILDREN, The Magazine for PARENTS"

The inner changes that come with adolescence bring also an interest in members of the opposite sex, an interest that should be understood by parents. If the adolescent is to continue to look to them for sympathy and guidance. These new interests, if properly dealt with, will not alienate the child from his home, but will show him that his family is understanding and that home is a place where both his boy and girl friends are always welcome.

The first thing for a musicless parent to do is to collect some good phonograph records. Get quiet ones for bedtime and gay ones for morning. Then have some lovely songs to be played over and over until some one is moved to sing.

Many young people become fatally softened and spoiled for business through the kindness and nurture which parents so tenderly provide. Parents do not always realize that it is not their function to shield a boy or girl from the practical realities of life, but to prepare him for them, step by step. Many continue their softening influence up until his entry into the business world, thus doing much to increase the problems of business and delay still more the young man's or woman's economic coming of age.

The kitchen is a fascinating laboratory which the home offers the child, and which can be of incalculable value to him. Working on this theory one allows her daughter at the creeping age to follow her into the kitchen while she is getting dinner. Her interest at that time in nesting pans and fitting covers to pots was high and she would make straight for the kitchen cabinet where they were kept. Don't keep your children out of the kitchen; let them come in and acquaint themselves with the tools and work of the home.

In building or considering a new home a lavatory on the first floor is of the greatest importance. Any mother who has been forced to take care of a heavy baby in a house with no lavatory on the first floor can testify to the extra labor involved. It is not so much a luxury as a necessity. Of course, the apartment obliterates this requirement.

Specialists in child nursing are impressed with the large role played in major illnesses by the attitude of the child-patient. These competent observers say they have the balance turned in the fight of a little child against infection by his inability to accept discomfort without kicking against the pricks, so that his feeble vitality is still further reduced by his emotional protest, until he loses the life struggle he should have won. Help your child to cultivate the right attitude toward illness.

Much of the controversy between mothers and daughters is over the matter of clothes, and most of it is the result of the mother's feeling that she has the right to dress her child. The result of such a policy is that at the first possible moment, namely when she can lay hands on some money, the daughter runs out to buy in a spirit of abandon. When the packages come home the trouble begins. If we are willing to teach our children the art of dress we must be willing to be shown ourselves.

Wooden Beads
Oddly intriguing are square wooden beads in natural color, with rondels of color between. Others are painted in gay colors.

Value of Right Words

There is no calamity which right words will not begin to redress.

Mendelssohn Hailed as Master of Philosophy

As a Jewish philosopher acting the part of a pioneer, Mendelssohn brought about the understanding of the beauty and humanism of the Bible, says a writer in the Boston Herald. He prepared a basis for the development of science and Judaism. His translation of the Pentateuch had inaugurated a new era in the education of the German Jews.

He gave to his brethren the German Bible, by which means he introduced them to the intellectual life of Germany, and thus through it once more into the civilization of the world at large. Mendelssohn has united Jewish and Hellenic life. He was the first to advocate the emancipation of the Jews. By his writings, he contributed to a great degree to the removal of the brutal prejudices against the German Jews.

Mendelssohn died on January 4, 1786, and was deeply mourned, not only by his coreligionists, but also by all the learned world. His memory was celebrated as that of a "Sage like Socrates." The greatest philosophers of the day exclaimed: "There was but one Mendelssohn."

May-Day Customs

As far back as the Medieval period in England, Chaucer says, it was customary to go out early on the morning of the first of May, "to fetch the flowers fresh." Hawthorne branches were carried home about sunset amid much merry-making. The name, The May, was given to the hawthorne, and the ceremony was called "the bringing home the May." A relic of the Roman custom when on May day the goddess Flora was especially honored is seen in the selection of a beautiful village maid to be crowned as queen of the May.

Theoretical Dollar

The term "compensated" or "stabilized dollar" was coined by Prof. Irving Fisher of Yale in his book, "Stabilizing the Dollar." It is a theoretical dollar having a constant purchasing power. The theory of the compensated dollar is to convert the present gold standard into a true commodity standard—that is, to standardize the dollar as a unit of purchasing power. Thus, there would be a gold dollar of constant purchasing power with varying weight instead of a gold dollar of standard weight and varying purchasing power.

Good Form

IN these days of publicity seeking one is never certain whether the start of a worthy cause is a sincere effort or merely an effort to get a name on the front page, says the Minneapolis Journal editorially. Irrespective of motives, however, the plea of the Philadelphia society matron to make "dryness" the thing socially, embodies the right idea. She is on the right track and while it is quite possible that she will never get anywhere, she has the satisfaction of knowing that she is one of the few dry advocates who has a definite destination in sight.

One hesitates to be in the least dogmatic when discussing the wet and dry question, but if there is a certainty to be found in the question at all it is that the acceptance or rejection of the law is due to a state of mind and not to federal agents and border patrolmen.

If Emily Post could be induced to assert in the next edition of her book on etiquette that it was wretched form to serve liquor before, after or during meals, it would not be long until a cocktail would have a social status among the solecisms equivalent to eating with one's knife or tucking one's napkin under the chin. A multitude of men and women could be got on short notice to die at the stake rather than to sip their coffee out of the saucer or take their tea out of a cup which still retained the spoon. The social and economic effects of the "moustache cup" were never very serious. It never disrupted business, the home and married life. No one ever went to a pauper's grave because he was a moustache cup addict. The toothpick never did the country any great harm. Yet, how complete is their banishment! How final and irrevocable!

If social usage can do so complete a job with these comparatively harmless practices and utensils, what couldn't it do with a real construction issue? The mere placing of an act in the category of "It isn't done," establishes the inhibition totally and universally. There was a time in the history of mankind when social usages had to be backed up by moral sanction. Now the situation has reversed itself completely. "Thou shalt not" means little unless supported by "It isn't good form."

Cheaper to Stay Well

IN spite of the best efforts of the doctors, it is still difficult for the average person to realize that it is cheaper and easier to stay well than it is to get well, writes Helena L. Williams in a magazine.

A lot of people think that it is brave to believe that the pain that bothers them will wear off without their doing anything about it. Some have a fear complex and won't go to the doctor because he might find something the matter with them. There is neither logic nor common sense in either of these attitudes.

For example, one of the most insidious diseases, one that creeps upon its victims with almost no pain but little other warning, is tuberculosis. Loss of weight and appetite, a stubborn cough, a persistent feeling of fatigue, are the commonplace indications of it. These are symptoms so familiar that we often treat them with contempt. Neglect, however, may lead to months, even years, of serious illness, and perhaps the loss of life itself. Thousands of patients have recovered from tuberculosis, but there would have been many legions more if they had faced their problem in time.

If one has a broken limb, he does not go hoping that it will "wear off." Why, then, should we take equally absurd chances with our lungs?

And this brings us to the statement often made in the Dispatch, that we all take an inventory of ourselves, having periodic examinations made by our family physician. Every car owner has the bus overhauled every spring and we can well afford to take similar care of our bodies. If the car develops a squeak in a new place that it never did before, we hurry to the garage. But the human frame may have any number of twinges and twists and must develop into serious illness before we usually see our doctor.

Prevention is better than cure and that applies to human as well as any other machinery. Good upkeep reduces the repair bill and keeps one living longer.

Woman Dictates

THEY talk about giving a woman more rights. Give them any more and the male species will soon have to stay in the kitchen, get the meals and wash the dishes.

Woman, indirectly and without any ostentatious show, has more power and more rights than any man. When it comes to talking about the "we" in the partnership, she is over 70 per cent the "we" and no silent partner at that.

Did you ever see the Man of the House and the Lady of the House considering interior decorations, furniture, curtains, etc.? It starts out with the Lady suggesting this and that, while the Man may even be objecting to the mere thought of any improvements. And it all winds up with everything picked out and done just as the Lady of the House had in her mind from the very start of things.

The vanity of many a man is touched when he is taken along on a shopping trip just to see some new goods. His opinion is asked if he likes this or that. If he falls into the trap and "likes this or that," the mere expression of the opinion is taken as O.K.ing the order for the hat or dress goods.

THESE may be cool nights for this season of the year. But, boy, how you can sleep at the lake. Those Briggs cartoons of family arguments, carried on far into the night, would never occur out in the Brainerd Lake Region. Mr. Lake Dweller and Mrs. Lake Dweller would fall asleep in the middle of the argument.

How does it come that some of our best golfers are portly, heavy set men? With the ladies, on the other hand, we find svelte, willowy, seductive forms hold sway. Is it because the ladies take their golf as seriously as they do their dieting?

WE have read of the Chicago Tribune amphibian plane which is to pioneer in a short ocean route to Berlin. But the name of the plane, the "Untin" Bowler, is what stumps us.

CONTESTING FOR THE 10,000 LAKES GOLF LAURELS

DAY OF SENSATIONAL UPSETS MARKS FRIDAY'S CHAMPIONSHIP FLIGHT

CHAMPION HARRY LEGG LOSES TO CHARLES MORRIS IN A SPECTACULAR MATCH

Breezy Point, Minn., July 6. — A battle royal is being waged today for championship title in the 10,000 Lakes Golf tournament at Breezy Point Lodge.

The four contenders are running in wonderful form with not an eyelash shade of difference.

At the end of the first nine holes of play at 11 A. M. today Roscoe Fawcett of Interlachen and D. N. Tallman, of Willmar, were even up.

And the same thing ruled with two other masters of golf. At the end of the first nine holes Henry Howe of the Minneapolis club and Sid W. Kinyon of Owatonna, were even up.

In the championship consolation, Harry Legg, champion of 1927 and 1928, was one up over Ole Williamson of Owatonna Country club, at the end of the first nine holes.

In the first flight consolation, Dan Davenport, Minikahda, was one up on Ralph W. Little, Minneapolis.

The weather continues fairly cool, cloudy and with a light breeze. A large gallery is watching the play. The women's play will be well under way this afternoon.

Breezy Point, Minn., July 6. — Sid W. Kinyon of Owatonna, Roscoe Fawcett of Interlachen, Henry Howe of the Minneapolis club, and D. N. Tallman of Willmar, are fighting it out today for championship of the 10,000 Lakes Golf tournament here as the result of triumphing after Friday's sensational upsets which marked yesterday's championship flight.

Harry Legg of Minikahda, for two years champion of this tournament, was defeated in the first round by Charles Morris, formerly of Minneapolis, 1 up in a spectacular match which went to the twenty-second hole.

Art Tveraa, runnerup last year, and who just set a record on the Country club links at Minneapolis, lost to Roscoe Fawcett of Interlachen by a 2 and 1 score.

S. W. Kinyon of the Owatonna Country club defeated George Matchan of the Minneapolis Country club, 3 and 2, and D. N. Tallman of Willmar, downed Jack Morris of the Minneapolis Country club, 1 up.

Ole Williamson of the Owatonna club, medalist in the Southern Minnesota golf tournament held at Rochester recently, was defeated by H. H. Walter of Minneapolis, 1 up.

In the men's championship consolation, Harry Legg defeated Matchan, 4 and 2. Williamson defeated Gillespie, 1 up, while Nelson defeated Tveraa by default. Gus Arenas of New York defeated Barney Toohey, 3 and 2.

In the afternoon round of the men's championship flight, Kinyon defeated Morris Van, 4 and 3; Howe won from Walter, 3 and 2; Fawcett defeated McClinette, 3 and 1, and Tallman downed Johns, 2 and 1.

St. Paul Women Win

In the women's tournament, Mrs. R. W. Little of Minneapolis, Mrs. A. W. Clapp of the Somerset club, St. Paul; Miss Mary Paper of the Northwood course, St. Paul, and Mrs. S. W. Waters of Interlachen, will contest for the title Saturday.

Mrs. Owen Safford, Minikahda, winner in 1927 and 1928, failed to qualify for the championship play.

There was no wind on the course Friday, and better scores resulted than Thursday, when a heavy wind hindered the golfers.

Brauerd was represented in the first flight. Bert Oma formerly of Brauerd and now of the Riverside links, Fergus Falls, defeated Walter Gooch, Minikahda, 6 and 4, yesterday.

W. R. Hiller of the Brainerd Country club, in the same flight, defeated George Webster of the Minikahda club, 8 and 7.

NOW BACK AT POLO GROUNDS FOR LONG STAY

MUST BEST SCHEDULE DECIDED— LY FAVORING PITTSBURGH AND CHICAGO

GIANTS, IN THIRD PLACE, HAVE ONLY 40 GAMES WITH THE WEAKER CLUBS

By WILLIAM J. DUNN
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, July 6.—The New York Giants are back at the Polo Grounds today for a protracted stay, ready to make a serious bid for the National League leadership.

The Giants are faced with the necessity not only of beating the other contending clubs in the last half of the season, but also of beating a schedule that decidedly favors Pittsburgh and Chicago. Their pennant chances may be decided within the next three weeks.

The Giants, in third place, four and a half games behind the leading Pirates, have only 40 games remaining with the weaker second division clubs. Chicago has 59 and Pittsburgh 55.

Accordingly, it is imperative that Charlie Stoneham's bread winners make the most of their 16-day home stand unless the Giants come out of this on top of the heap it will be hard to picture them coming home in front next September.

Brooklyn opposes the Giants today before moving along to Flatbush. Tomorrow the first of the western clubs, Cincinnati reaches the polo grounds for a four-game series.

Then follow Chicago, St. Louis and Pittsburgh, in order, bringing with them sufficient power to test the pennant mettle of any team.

If the Giants clear the Brooklyn hurdle today, they will have the Cincinnati series for a "breather" before tackling the stronger western clubs.

However, New York may be able to hurdle the strong opposition in the home stand.

The entire Giant squad is in good condition today with the exception of Lindstrom and Roush who are suffering leg injuries. Their batting seems consistently powerful and their pitchers appear to have reached something like their natural stride.

N. P. DOPED TO BEAT AKELEY

LOCALS EXPECTED TO INCREASE PERCENTAGE IN WIN COLUMN COLUMN AT AKELEY

The Brainerd Railroaders are doped to win from Akeley and increase their lead in the Northwoods Baseball League tomorrow.

The following players who will make the trip to Akeley will meet at the Y. M. C. A. building at 9:30 A. M. on Sunday: Engbreton, Nutting, Ringer, Anderson, Erickson, G. Erickson, Richmond, Fogelstrom, Hanson, Peterson, Jarboe and Fitzharris.

Manager Lester Peterson announced today that he has a surprise team booked to meet the locals here at an early date. He said he would announce the name of the team next week.

GUY BUSH PLANS TO REFORM SELF

Will Quit Easing Up at Soft Spots in Pitching.

Guy Bush, more widely known as Joe, and sometimes referred to as "Mississippi Abe," is going to reform.

This information, however, isn't anything that will change his habits of living, for Joe adheres rigidly to all training rules and always gets to bed early.

In fact, Joe's self-made training rules leave nothing for a manager to desire. Still Joe says he's going to reform, writes Ronald McIntyre in the Chicago Journal. And he doesn't mean that he's going to quit selling bonds, his manner of making a living between baseball seasons. Joe says he's going to institute the reforms in his methods of pitching.

Heretofore Joe has had a habit of easing up when he thought he had a soft spot in an opposing batting order. Possessed of excellent speed and a good curve, Joe always was trying to develop a slow ball that would make him one of the outstanding pitchers in the league.

Now it was perfectly all right for Joe to work on his slow ball but there were times when he was pitching last season when he would have been much better off if he had postponed his experimenting until the morning practice of the next day.

Any number of instances might be cited to show that Joe used poor judgment when he eased up last season. One day, in particular, the Cubs were playing Brooklyn and Jess Petty was pitching against Bush. The Cubs had a one or two run lead and there were two out and two on when Petty strode to the plate. Bush didn't bear down as he had been doing and a single to right resulted and the score was tied. Later in the game, Petty got another hit that scored another run and the ball game went to Brooklyn.

Now Joe has been hearing of the trials and misfortunes that Dazzy Vance had getting established as about the best right hander in baseball. He has heard tell of how Vance toured the minors for years until he learned that his only trouble was that he was looking for soft spots in the lineup where he could slow up a little. Dazzy found out that he had to "bear down" all the time and when he did he became almost unbeatable.

And so—Joe Bush is going to reform.

Watching the Scoreboard

By United Press

Yesterday's Hero — Chuck Klein, whose home run in the ninth inning at Philadelphia, enabled the Phils to defeat the St. Louis Cardinals, 10 to 9. It was the 11th straight defeat for the 1928 National League pennant winners. Three errors by the winners enabled St. Louis to make eight hits good for nine runs.

The Chicago White Sox could make only 10 runs out of 20 hits and two opponents' errors at Cleveland, and lost to the Indians, 11 to 10. The lead swung back and forth, Cleveland taking a four run lead early in the game only to see the Sox assume a three run advantage in the fifth. Five runs in the seventh put the Indians within reach of the victory they clinched with a run in the eighth.

No other games were scheduled, the eastern American League teams riding westward for their second invasion of that section while the western National Leaguers were on their way east.

RESULTS IN TENNIS TOURNAMENT FRIDAY

Vincent Kampmann defeated Hugh McCaffrey, 8-6, 6-4.
"Bud" Eckholm beat Vern Cady, 6-3, 6-1.

Blackburne's Bad Boy

By QUIN HALL.

INDEPENDENCE DAY and Art Shires, the Chicago White Sox first sacker, who has done something toward gathering the reputation of a "bad boy," have fireworks in common. Didn't he appear on the playing field at Comiskey Park in Chicago one day wearing a red crusher hat? That episode started heated words and led up to a reported club house battle. It finally simmered down with this baseball "Bad Boy" doing a job of bench warming.

Undoubtedly Shires is a character. He probably isn't in a class with those old timers "Rube" Waddell or "Bugs" Raymond. It is likely that he doesn't measure up to "Babe" Ruth when the "Bam" really wants to be a bad boy.

Shires impresses one as being so full of life and fun that he just can't stop himself. He wants to win ball games and he burns up, with enthusiasm when he is out there on the diamond. But he is getting a reputation as a bad boy whether he deserves it or not—and so he's probably the most talked-of fellow on the Sox team.

"Where's Shires, the bad boy?" we asked Manager Russell Blackburne in the Sox club house at Chicago recently. It was a hot day. The fellows were draped around trying to keep cool before game. A fellow in a blue shirt was tilted back in a chair with his feet sprawled up against the lockers. He was smoking a cigar. At the call of "Art," the figure unwound and came over. We were face to face with baseball's bad boy and he looked like a big, good-natured kid. We talked with him a minute and went back into conference with Blackburne.

As we were pulling anchor,

Shires unwound again and followed us over to the door. "Lena's been keeping me on the bench and, believe me, it's been a lesson." (Lena is Blackburne.) "If he ever lets me up off those planks I'll be good. I've proven I can be a bad boy and now I want to prove I'm a ball player."

Another view. They tell the story that the day he joined the Sox last Fall he hit plenty. After the game, he came back to the clubhouse and hurled his glove and cap with great force against the wall. "So THIS is the American League, eh?" he chortled. "I'll bat 1,500 against this pitching!"

Shires may be hard to manage—this "tremendous Texan"—but he'll have to do something besides wear a red hat to prove he's a bad boy. And he's likely to prove he's a great ball player before he proves he's a real bad boy!

Brings Joy to Detroit

By QUIN HALL.

IF YOU happen to be in Detroit, try to tell one of those Tiger fans they have a big gap at the first corner which ought to be plugged up. After you get out of the hospital, you'll begin to realize that you had a bum idea of kidding the Speed Town rooster.

This year, Detroit is taking its baseball seriously. They feel that in Bucky Harris they have one of the smartest managers in the game (which will probably call forth another argument) and that, if the Tigers get their share of the breaks, they will finish well up in the final league standings.

And arguing about that gap at the first corner will get you nowhere except into trouble. David Dale Alexander is tending to the territory adjacent to first base, mark of .342. Charlotte, in the South Atlantic League, paid $500 for him in 1925 and there he batted .331. He stuck with Charlotte in 1926 and was purchased by Toronto for $5,000 for the 1927 season. The first year with the Maple Leafs, he batted .338 and last year he nicked the leather for .382.

So far this Summer, Alexander of Detroit, has been doing a great job at the plate and outfield. Close observers claim that he is a "right-handed Babe Ruth." He has been tickling opposing twirlers for four-ply wallops; but the fact that he is plenty dangerous every time he steps up to the platter is sufficient to interest the Tiger fans.

And how they are interested! He looks like their best bet in years.

Porcupine Shown to Be

Much Maligned Animal

One of the most unconcerned denizens of the woods and one about which has been woven many a fantastic tale is the porcupine.

It is the marksman of the forest, as the story goes—the Bowman that shoots barbed arrows at those it sees fit to attack. One in imagination can almost see a cloud of quills winging their way toward some enemy, ready to pierce any unprotected skin and, once beneath the skin, presenting the problem of the fish-hook imbedded in a luckless angler's finger. It has the reputation of belligerency of the two-gun man, swaggering around, scowling at any luckless person who chances to get in the way.

If ever a more unfair picture of the character of an animal has been painted, a grave injustice has been done. The porcupine, as a matter of fact, is mostly intent on minding its own business and hopes that other animals will do the same. It is not particularly afraid of any others, knowing, as the skunk does, that it will not be attacked by any but the very young, and the very young soon learn that a good defense is a wonderful offense, reversing the usual strategy.

Printers Absolved of #### Charge of Irreverence

An average layman, fairly familiar with his Bible, hastily opened the Good Book to verify the statement of the Literary Digest's lexicographer that in the Scriptures the personal pronoun representing our Lord did not begin with a capital letter. To his surprise, the learned doctor was right. And if the reader turned back to the Old Testament, he discovered also that the pronouns referring to God were in the same style. The reason for this, the lexicographer explains, is that early-day printshops had inadequate upper cases (capitals) and that the rule was invoked, not because of a lack of reverence, but of necessity. So far as we know, Bible publishers are the only printers who have remained true to this tradition. Certainly there are few, if any, newspapers that do not use the upper case first letter in a pronoun referring to Christ or God.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

This Frank Decade

Mary Elizabeth has just started to dancing school and on the occasion of her second or third lesson her mother, sitting by as an interested spectator, was glad to see that she and her boy partner seemed to be holding a conversation. "What were you and Jimmie talking about?" she asked when the little girl joined her after the dance. "Oh, just talking," evaded the youngster. "Well, what did Jimmie say," persisted the mother. "He said, 'Gee, you're a rotten dancer,'" revealed Mary Elizabeth. "Oh!" cried the stricken parent, thinking her daughter would be offended. "What did you say to that, honey?" "I said," replied the child, calmly, "Say, you're not so good yourself."

Catfish Peculiar

Catfishes are called catfishes because they have feelers on the head, like cats' "smellers." They have no scales, their bodies being naked and smooth, or mottled with long plates. The different species vary in size from dwarfs two inches long to six feet giants. The stone-cats and the mad-toms, seldom more than three inches long, sting painfully, but not dangerously. Only a few fossil catfishes have been found. The present scaleless members of the group evidently come from scaly ancestors. The peculiarities that distinguish them are caused by specialization of some parts and by degeneration of other parts.

Swedes Made History

Sweden's international relations were kept alive by the contact between the home country and Swedish emigrants and settlers abroad. Thus in the year 375 Swedes penetrated as far south as the Black sea and founded an Austro-Gothian dominion. Others settled on the British islands and in Normandy. Headed by the great statesman and warrior, Rurik, one group went east across the Baltic and founded the empire of Russia, named after the coast district of Roslagen, near Stockholm, whence came its founders.

Old American College

Dartmouth college at Hanover, N. H., is an outgrowth of a school founded at Lebanon, Conn., by Eleazar Wheelock for the Christian education of Indian youth. Funds raised in England and contributed largely by Lord Dartmouth enabled Wheelock to move 150 miles to the junction of the Connecticut and White rivers, and so allowed him to enlarge the scope of his work. The province of New Hampshire gave a charter to the new Dartmouth college in 1769.

History of the Diamond

India was the original home of the diamond as a jewel. For centuries India remained the sole source of Europe's diamond supply. About 1730 diamonds were discovered in Brazil. In 1867 diamonds were discovered in South Africa. South African diamonds constitute more than 90 per cent of the world's supply. From their discovery to the present time they have yielded 90,000,000 carats. The diamonds of the world probably represent a value of $5,000,000,000.

Hope That Beams Will

Divulge Historic Dates

With saws and drills and microscopes, the specialists engaged in the beam studies are digging from the heart of ancient logs and beams a more accurate calendar of happenings in the southwestern United States than that which we possess for the civilizations of the Egyptians or the Mayas.

The work is built on the fact that every growing tree leaves in its trunk a ring for each year; and on the further fact that each one of these rings has an individuality of its own—a different width, definiteness, or character resulting from different climatic or seasonal differences.

Furthermore, all trees in a given region show the same ring sequence; and some of the rings, deposited in an especially characteristic season of drought or moisture, stand out so plainly that it is almost as if Nature had rubber-stamped the ring: "This is the year 1338 A. D."

The work was undertaken after expeditions of the National Geographic society had uncovered the ruins of Pueblo Bonito in New Mexico, one of America's earliest "apartment houses." Many interesting things were learned about the customs and culture of the 2,500 people who once occupied the great structure; but the date at which they flourished remained a secret.

Some of the old beams used in supporting the roof were well preserved, and when sawed showed characteristic rings. The idea was conceived of tracing a tree-ring calendar back from the present to the days when Pueblo Bonito's beams were growing.

Wisest Men Have Ever

Been Slow of Speech

People are likely to set too much store by "conversation." A very large proportion of it isn't worth 2 cents. It must be conceded that there is a kind of exhilaration in talking. One can even get headache by it; showing that it has a direct effect on the tempo of the heart and on the nervous system. The popular notion that one must talk "for the sake of relief" is probably bogus; because silence, once it is learned and practiced, gives a greater relief.

Keeping still is an interesting game, to the point of being, at times, delightful; especially when employed to keep out of a furious row under full headway. It is a difficult game, therefore the more inviting to play. One may suffer from the invidious implication that it is timidity instead of good sense that keeps him from participation, but let him remember that many of the wisest men within human knowledge were taciturn—"minded their own business," and we don't know but that the slow to speech get along about as well as the wordy and impassionate; some think, better.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Washington's Cherry Trees

Mrs. Taft shortly after going into the White House ordered 80 Japanese cherry trees to be sent to Washington and planted. She had seen and admired these trees while traveling in the East. A Japanese resident of New York made her a gift of 2,000 of these trees. When they reached America they contained an insect that was injurious to American plants. For that reason they were thrown overboard. The city of Tokyo then gave the United States 3,000 of these trees. The water slide around the Speedway and the Tidal basin in Washington have these trees in blossom during the early spring.

Honoring the Dead

Annual Decoration day is most enthusiastically observed by the Lower Yukon River Indians. Late last autumn fifteen families of Indians from Nulato and other villages met together to fulfill the custom of erecting houses over the graves of those who died during the year. The shelters of the old graves were given a fresh coat of brilliant paint.

Many of the unique mausoleums have windows and floors and contain rugs and other articles that were used by the departed ones.

Every western Alaska Indian tribe has a different method of protecting the spirit of departed ones.

Cumbersome Old Vessels

Galleon was a name formerly given to a large kind of vessel with three masts and three or four decks, such as those used by the Spaniards in their commerce with South America to transport precious metals. They were large, clumsy, square-sterned vessels, having bulwarks three or four feet thick, all of which were so encumbered with topmasts and so over-weighted in proportion to their draft of water that they could bear little canvas, even with smooth seas and light winds.

CALLS AMBULANCE BEFORE ACCIDENT

Washington, Ind., July 6.—(U.P.)—Foresight of Mrs. John Brown in calling an ambulance when she saw an automobile speed by her farm home toward a freshly traveled curve probably saved the lives of Chester Valley and Carl Lockett, both 26.

The ambulance arrived to find the men's car overturned and its occupants laying in the roadway, seriously injured. Both will recover, doctors said.

CONFESSED SLAYER PLEADS NOT GUILTY

Jackson, Mich., July 6.—(U.P.)—J. Howard Shorney, confessed slayer of his young wife after she had admitted he was not the father of her unborn child, pleaded not guilty when arraigned and charged with first degree murder today. He was remanded to jail.

Prosecutor Harry Bordman said he expected Shorney to change his plea when arraigned again the first of next week.

Andrew J. Volstead is Examined at Richester

Rochester, July 6.—(U.P.)—Physicians at Mayo clinic today continued to examine Andrew J. Volstead, father of the national prohibition act, who came here to find relief from what was believed a kidney ailment.

Preliminary examinations revealed, it was said, Volstead was not suffering from any serious ailment, but the exact nature of his illness had not been diagnosed.

Dr. A. M. Snell, under whose care Volstead was placed, was expected to consult with other physicians in the prohibition leader's case.

TO HONOR RESCUERS OF SPANISH FLIERS

Madrid, July 6.—(U.P.)—Premier de Rivera summoned the officers of the British airplane carrier Eagle today to be decorated with the Spanish Cross of Merit for saving Commander Ramon Franco and his three companions from the mid-Atlantic.

It was Spain's crowning gesture of appreciation for the great service the Britishers had done to the Spanish government in rescuing the fliers.

As soon as the full list of the members of the crew of the Eagle is received from the British admiralty the sailors and marines of the rescuing ship also will be awarded medals.

MOUNTED GUARDSMEN IN GREAT MAN HUNT

Boonesville, Miss., July 6.—(U.P.)—Mounted national guardsmen armed with machine guns led one of the greatest man hunts of southern Mississippi today, on the trail of Dewitt Geno, alleged double murderer and self-acclaimed "bad man."

The troops were sent by Governor Theodore G. Bilbo last night after Sheriff L. M. Womack of Prentiss county appealed to the state for aid.

The guardsmen took up the trail at dawn. Orders were to shoot to kill. Geno is heavily armed.

Standard Time

The United States Naval observatory has three standard clocks running in constant temperature vaults, electrically wound and sealed to keep the air pressure constant. Meridian circle observations of selected stars are taken regularly on clear nights, and from these observations the errors of standard clocks are determined. The observatory sends out time signals. Correct time is given over radio networks as an advertising device.

Subdivide Air Like Land Now

$160,000,000 in Chicago Rights

Merchandise Mart, World's Biggest Business Building, Pioneer in Solving Problems of Construction Over Railroad Tracks in Mid-Western Metropolis.

CHICAGO'S air is being subdivided now just as the real estate men of the city have laid out big subdivisions of land and millions of dollars are represented in the development of air rights for the construction of great buildings over the right of way of railroad tracks in the downtown district and in some of the territory adjacent to it.

It is estimated that there are around 200 acres available for air right development. On the South side from Van Buren street to Sixteenth street about 110 acres could be used for this purpose. Over the Illinois Central tracks the estimate places the number of acres that could be used in this way at 68, and on the West side there are around 20 acres, according to engineers who have made a study of air rights in Chicago. The estimated value of these rights puts about $160,000,000 "in the air," say the experts.

There is a vast stretch of tracks belonging to the Illinois Central running for more than five miles along the lake front in the heart of the most valuable real estate section. Just north of the Chicago river, less than a mile from the center of Chicago's shopping district, is a long stretch of railroad tracks belonging to the Chicago & Northwestern railroad. Just west of the Chicago river, also less than a mile from the heart of the city, is another long stretch of tracks belonging to various railroads, such as the Pennsylvania, Burlington, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul and the Union Station company.

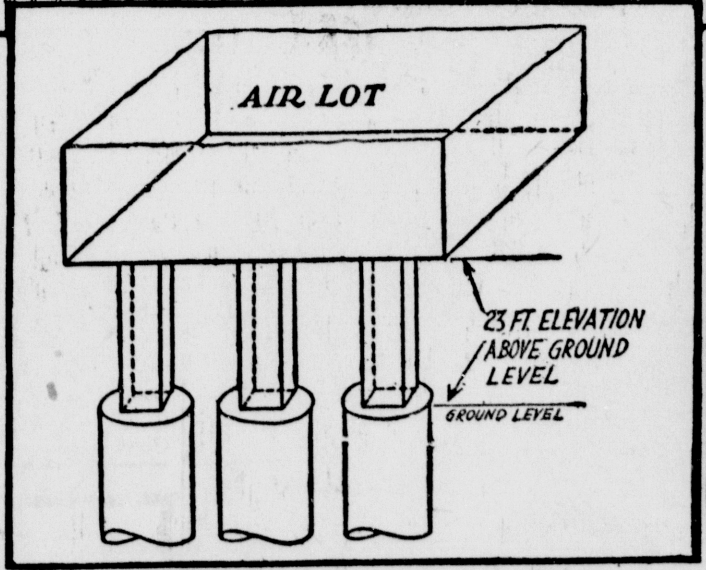

It was in the biggest single air right development in Chicago—the $35,000,000 Merchandise Mart, the world's largest business building—that for the first time a subdivision was made of both land and air. This was over the tracks of the Chicago & Northwestern railroad. There was no precedent for the method to be adopted in this subdivision, and the purchasers were pioneering in this field. It required the combined efforts of lawyers, engineers, surveyors and architects to coin the descriptions, the words and phrases necessary to convey to the mind the idea of what was being subdivided and sold. The purchaser required certain portions of the ground below O-O datum to plant caissons and certain portions of space to put columns on the caissons between O-O datum and 23 feet above O-O to support the building. The air lot began at 23 feet above datum and covers the entire area of the property. By the deed the purchaser obtained a fee simple title to the caisson lots—the foundation of the building. Nothing can deprive the purchaser of the right to keep the caissons in the ground, the steel columns on the caissons and the building in the air.

Utilization of air rights marks the beginning of a new type of development which is destined to add vastly to the growth, prestige and commercial importance of the metropolis of the Central West.

Great Buildings Over Tracks

The construction of commercial buildings over railway tracks and yards was unthought of a generation or two ago. As late as the beginning of the present century the term "air rights" had never been heard of. Even in such congested centers as New York and Chicago, no railroad had ever sought to create a commercial asset out of its occupied air space.

Today, however, some of the finest hotels and offices and apartment buildings in New York city are located above what was formerly unsightly railway yards in the vicinity of the Grand Central terminal. These include such notable buildings as the Biltmore hotel, the Roosevelt hotel, the Graybar office building, the Grand Central palace and the New York Central office building. In Cleveland, a great $150,000,000 terminal project, involving the development of air rights, is under way.

The above sketch shows what an air lot looks like; the air is now being subdivided in Chicago just the same as land and in the plans for construction of the Merchandise Mart land and air was subdivided for the first time. The shaded portions of the map show the available Chicago air rights, approximately 200 acres, the value of which is estimated at $160,000,000. The Merchandise Mart (upper right), world's biggest business building now under construction, is the largest single air right development in the middle west and was the pioneer in this new method of constructing buildings over railroad tracks. The other big air development is that of the new building of the Chicago Daily News (lower left) now completed.

In Chicago the field is very extensive, but scarcely touched as yet. Only two air rights developments have been perfected here so far, the site of the new building of the Chicago Daily News and that of the Merchandise Mart. The Daily News structure, on the west bank of the Chicago river at Madison street, is completed, while the Merchandise Mart, which will house 2,000 manufacturers, wholesalers and importers, will be ready for occupancy next May. Both buildings are located on the Chicago river and with tracks underneath make it of extraordinary convenience. Under the Merchandise Mart, the Chicago & Northwestern railroad will have an immense incoming and outgoing freight station, bringing the merchandise of the world right in the Mart building. Both structures utilized the air rights over the Chicago & Northwestern tracks. Another project to use extensive air rights is the proposed Crane Tower, which will use these rights over the Illinois Central on Randolph street facing Grant Park.

Clear Way to Rights

Many legal complications had to be cleared before the first development of air rights was completed. For instance, all railroads have mortgages covering their tracks and other property, which in the case of each railroad run into hundreds of millions of dollars. No one would purchase air rights and foundation rights and invest large sums of money in erecting a building on these air rights unless he could first obtain a title to his foundation and air clear of the railroad mortgages. From all the legal precedents the pioneers in air rights had to guide them, it was found that "air" is not capable of absolute ownership. But if a conveyance of air rights is connected with the use and ownership of the tangible earth, it will pass a good title to the air.

To facilitate the purchase of air rights and foundation rights and to clearly define the property to be released from the railroad mortgages, it was deemed feasible to subdivide the land of the railroad both vertically and horizontally and to create a plat and lots which were easily described and located and capable of conveyance by lot numbers and reference to a recorded plat. The pioneers had to be careful to insure their legal rights. The use of the word "air" by itself was feared. So the phrase "land property and space" was utilized in the deed, which left no room for doubt as to what was conveyed.

The intensive commercial development of air rights over railway terminals and yards has the distinct advantage of involving property that for the most part is singly owned. Because of this single ownership, the development of the entire area can be restricted and regulated to insure the best possible results with reference to width of streets, size of blocks, type and character of buildings, uniformity of architecture, desirability of tenants and so on.

Message of the Mart

Any air-rights development involves numerous and complex engineering problems. Special and costly foundations must be laid, so as to carry the enormous weight of the superstructures in such a manner as to prevent vibration due to train operations. The columns which support the heavy superstructures must occupy the narrow spaces between the railway tracks so as not to interfere with railway operations. This can be accomplished only through the use of heavy steel girders resting upon deep set foundations of the most substantial character. In the Merchandise Mart, more than 50,000 tons of steel, the greatest amount ever put into a building, will be used.

The movement embodied in the Merchandise Mart is much more than a big building project and the utilization of air rights. It sounds a message of economy and efficiency in distribution that will give the mercantile world a new conception of co-operation, competition and efficiency. It represents a culminating point in the effort to eliminate two distinct distribution evils:

1—The excessive cost of taking merchandise to the merchant instead of the economical method of having merchants come to the merchandise.

2—The waste of the merchant's time after he to the market by enabling him to do all his buying conveniently under one roof.

GRID STAR PLAYS OLD ROLE IN EXCITING 'TIME, PLACE, GIRL'

Grant Withers, who enacts a football hero in "The Time, the Place and the Girl," the all talking Vitaphone screen adaptation of the famous stage success which Howard Bretherton directed for Warner Bros., and which comes to the Peoples theatre of Crosby, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, July 7, 8 and 9, was a football star for six years while attending Kemper Military Academy at Booneville, Mo.

The part is right down husky Mr. Withers' own alley. He carries on his body more football scars than a centipede has joints. Both of his legs have been broken, his nose has been fractured almost as often as Jack Dempsey's and distributed over his face are any number of reminders that he will carry to the grave. By consulting them he can recall the particular football contest in which he acquired them.

Withers stands six feet three in his socks and weight two hundred pounds and is possibly still growing since he is not twenty-four years old. He has always kept in perfect physical condition so it is more than likely he distributed a few bumps himself while on the hobbail circuit.

Betty Compson and Gertrude Olmsted have the leading feminine roles in "The Time, the Place and the Girl," and the cast includes John Davidson, James R. Kirkwood, Bert Roach, Vivian Oakland, Gretchen Hartman, Irene Haisman and Gerald King.

Delightful scenes that helped make this Hough, Adams and Howard musical comedy a famous stage success are faithfully reproduced on the screen.

Camp Clearwater, July 2.—Instruction this morning was in the methods of making fire by the friction process. In order to earn the Camping Merit Badge it is required that the scout be able to build a fire without artificial means. Several boys showed interest in the demonstration.

Inspection today was won by cabins two and five. The boys in two are: Kenneth Burns, Carroll and David Garceau, Paul Hale, Morton Magoffin, Nicholas Knickerbocker, Robert Pierce and James Van Evera. The scouts of cabin five are: Robert Cohen, Mark Kasper, Robert Kasper, Beriah and Shelby Magoffin, and Harold Williams.

The officers and scouts extend thanks to Dr. Williams of Brainerd for the gift of two cases of pop which he so generously presented.

A kittenball game was played after supper between the members of cabins one and three. Batteries for cabin one were H. Strickler, Miller, Anderson and R. Strickler; for cabin three, Jackson and W. Odenthal. The score was 21-7 in favor of cabin three. Another contest will be staged tomorrow between cabins two and four.

The camp-fire program this evening was in the hands of the members of cabin two. James Van Evera, patrol leader, acted as chairman, and did a commendable job of it. The program lasted for three-quarters of an hour and consisted of the following numbers:

Acrobatic stunts—David and Carroll Garceau.
Mouth organ solo—S. C. Bakken.
Song—Paul Hale.
Talking contest—Curo, Knudsen, Cohen and Steinfeld.
Song—Morton Magoffin.
Story—David Garceau.
Story—Sherman Pease.
Reading—O. P. Bakken.
Story—S. C. Bakken.
Song—Scouts.
Taps.

Each cabin will be held responsible for one camp-fire program. We hope that the next will be even better.

CHILD REGAINS SPEECH

Marion Wetherbee, Five Years Old, Finds Speech Again After Serious Accident

An audible whisper came from the lips of five year old Marion Wetherbee at the local hospital yesterday for the first time since she was injured on Wednesday, June 26.

Marion, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Wetherbee of Crow Wing, was seriously injured when she was struck by a car on highway No. 27. She suffered a concussion of the brain and fears were expressed for her life.

After several days of semi unconsciousness Marion rallied but was unable to speak. Yesterday nurses were able to detect words the child was saying.

Reports from the hospital today were that Marion was improving and that soon she will be well enough to leave the hospital.

FLIES MONOCOUE FROM MANHATTAN

Ed. Billings, Kansas Youth Has Won Spurs as a Licensed Pilot, Passed Stiff Tests

DOES STUNT FLYING

Monoplane Now at Rosko's Field is Half Owned by Herbert Webb, Former Brainerdite

To demonstrate the worth of his craft and his own ability as a flier, Ed. Billings, 21 year old Manhattan Kansas pilot, did a series of loops, side spins and other stunts for ten minutes over Rosko's airport last evening five minutes after he and his chum Robert Brown arrived from Kansas to visit their friend and half owner of the plane, Herbert Webb, of Manhattan, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Webb, Brainerd.

The plane, a monocoque, five cylinder air cooled, manufactured by Mono Craft, a Velle output, is a sturdy neat appearing "ship." Billings brought it to earth neatly after flying straight from Jefferson, Iowa where he landed for food yesterday afternoon in his flight from Manhattan.

Despite his youth Billings has demonstrated to the satisfaction of the U. S. Aeronautical Association that he is a capable flier. He has passed the severe tests demanded of a licensed pilot and has gained the letter C on the tail and wing of his plane, a mark which distinguishes him as a pilot whom anyone is safe to fly with. He has further won the letter N before the C which accords him the privilege of crossing boundaries into foreign countries. The identifying marks of his plane are NC7831.

Billings has had 255 actual flying hours in the air. He started flying at the age of 19 years and became one of the Commercial Airways of Kansas City's special pilots operating from Kansas City.

The "Monocoque" was purchased by Billings and Webb for $2,700.

Billings will give a demonstration of his flying tonight at 7 o'clock at the Rosko field. He will also put on a stunt exhibition.

Daphne by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER LXIV.

HE sighed, and he raised his head. "I can't believe it—that you could do this to me, Daphne. It hurts!" He brushed his wet eyes with the back of his hand. "After all we've been to each other—"

"After all we've been . . . to each other?" she questioned gently. She couldn't keep her voice steady. It shook, betraying her. "You did love me, Daphne?"

"Yes, I thought so." "You thought so? Good Lord don't you know? You told me. Don't you remember?"

She couldn't face him then. Her eyes sought the floor. Did she remember? Poor Daphne! Could she ever forget?

"Don't you know?" "She nodded. "Yes, I loved you, Ralph."

He reached out his arms to her then, laughing a little unsteadily. "Of course you did—and you'll always be my girl. Listen, we'll forget this row. We'll go away, you and I. We two together, Daphne—we'll defy them all. What does anyone know against us? Oh, Greely—but hell!—once we're married, and we're clear of here, he'll forget it."

"You don't have to worry, that's straight. Chivalrous old crook—wouldn't come after me if I were married. We're safe as Liberty Bonds. We'll snap our fingers at the world, and we'll go sailing off on our honeymoon in the Royal Suite—no the bridal suite, and see the sights in London and gay Paris. . . . You'll never be sorry. . . . Name the day, Daphne. . . . tomorrow?"

He tilted back her head—the old gesture. She was crying. Quietly. Hopelessly.

Involuntarily he recoiled from her. "Oh, if that's the way you feel. Dropping me—is that it? Too good for me now, eh? Tell me you don't love me anymore, because you've found out I have a few human failings. Well I never pretended to be a plaster saint. But I'm no worse than the rest. A damn sight better than some."

"Anybody would have done what I did! If you're going to pull this pure lily stunt, how do you explain Greely eh? How do you swallow him and his record? Go on—tell me you're going to throw me over. Explain why you don't love me any more—"

She made a little despairing gesture of dissent. "I couldn't explain. I wouldn't even try now, after . . . after what you said." "After what I said?"

"After everything." "Everything! Oh Daphne, don't get coy. We love each other. Face it. I may not come up to all your specifications, maybe you don't come up to all mine. But we do love each other—that's everything. That's all that counts. Look at me, and try to tell me you don't! You know you do—you always did—just as I always loved you."

"You never loved me. Not ever. I know that now. And I don't even know when I stopped loving you, Ralph. It just went away . . . in little ways . . . until there wasn't anything left—"

She touched her flat chest—"but an ache—here!" He watched her, fascinated. Such a small, almost shabby little thing, standing all alone in the middle of his handsome, heavily upholstered room. She couldn't be crazy enough to refuse him? To give up a chance like this? Unless . . . unless . . .

He began to laugh unpleasantly. "So . . . there's a reason for all this! Allan is the conquering hero, eh? And I can take a little ride to the house—"

"You and Greely, planning it, and I, the poor fool, unsuspecting—"

"Allan hasn't come back," she said lifelessly. "He's gone—gone for good. But that won't keep Mr. Greely from clearing him. That has to be—no matter—no matter what happens—"

He couldn't believe it. She couldn't mean it! He played his last trick then. "You're not going to stand by me, is that what you mean, Daphne? You washing your hands of me? Going back on your word?"

It was acting. He felt that his whole future hung on her answer. If he could hold her he'd be safe. "What word? What do you mean?" she faltered. But she knew. That night—that night on the cliffs above the sea when she told him she loved him. That night she thought he would be her's forever.

"You know what I mean. You know what you promised. It was understood . . . you won't go back on me now, when I need you most? You wouldn't do that, Daphne?" He clung to her, begging, beseeching.

"I'll stay by you," she promised finally. She picked up her coat and her gloves. She even stopped to right a stool he had kicked over and straighten a crumpled rug on her way to the door.

She did not look back this time. Ralph McKevitt with his head in his hands, his mulberry Chesterfield and tapestry cushions were indelibly stamped on her mind. She would remember them forever.

Henry, the gray-faced butler who served old Mr. Greely was anything but cordial when she came back.

"Yes, Mr. Greely is in now," he admitted. "He will see you in the library."

"A very odd sort for a secretary," he confided to Mrs. Hargins, the cook. "Very excitable. And coming twice of a Sunday!"

"There's more that goes on in this house than you or me will ever know," said Mrs. Hargins darkly. "I was never one to talk, but I remember in the old days—Pshaw! There's your well, Henry!"

"Get something hot for the young lady," Mr. Greely said when Henry answered, and presently Daphne was sipping hot chocolate before the fire that the old man had burning every night in the library, even during the summer.

It was always cool in that dark, high-ceilinged room. Daphne let him move her chair closer to the blaze, and drank the chocolate docilely. She was so tired, so in-wardly cold.

He held the black box on his knobby knees, and went over its contents with her. Every scrap of paper the old man scrutinized; every detail he weighed.

"And is that all?" he asked finally, when the fire had burned itself down to a few red embers, Daphne's whole body was one miserable, weary ache.

"Except one letter—for me . . . You wouldn't mind if I didn't show you this?" "Didn't mean anyone to see it—not even me I think—"

A slow painful blush spread itself over her small, pale face, crimsoning even her neck. "It was just—personal," she repeated nervously.

"Allan's a fine lad," the old man said at last.

She clasped and unclasped her hands. "But foolhardy. He should never have left."

"No," she agreed.

"It would have been better for young McKevitt if he'd had to face the music early . . . Things look bad for Virgil McKevitt's boy now . . . my old friend's boy, Daphne . . . You've made it hard for me—"

"Harder for myself," she murmured.

"For you? What's Ralph McKevitt to your life?"

"He thinks he's going to be my husband," she said in that flat, tired voice that grated on Greely's nerves all evening.

"You're not going to marry him! Now! With Allan—"

"I suppose so, I promised."

They could hear the old man swearing, way out in the kitchen. "And in front of a young lady!" the butler marvelled. "I'm really surprised, I really am!"

But Mrs. Hargins, the cook motioned him to be silent. "My, my, how it brings back old times! He hasn't gone on like that for years. Bless his heart, he'll die with his boots on yet!"

It was very late when the Greely limousine drew up at the Hinckley's front door, and a pale and bedraggled Daphne got out and climbed the old, sagging front stairs. Very late—but not too late for Mrs. Spellman to raise on one elbow in her bed in the front room upstairs, and take it all in.

Long after dark—had fallen into a fitful sleep she lay there wide awake planning what she would tell Mrs. Halliday tomorrow. "And a chauffeur, mind you. With a cap. You could easily tell from the way he slammed the door what he thought of her. I always said, if a lady is a lady she gets respect. Men can always tell . . ."

But Daphne was beyond caring what anybody thought. She lived in a nightmare of her own. "And I used to wish things would happen," she thought despondently. "I used to think it would be heaven to marry Ralph McKevitt . . . I used to think Allan was nothing—and Ralph was every thing. I used to envy Crystal because he liked her . . . and now I'd give everything in the world if she had him!"

Just a Piece of Thistledown

By JOHN SMITH

(Copyright.)

"THEY'RE just thistledown! They simply float along on any breeze that offers, and never try to resist! They're no use in this world!"

Stephen Hancock's voice was bitter. His wife said nothing in reply, but sighed and returned to her book. After all, Molly was their daughter, and perhaps her wild ways were somewhat their fault. It seemed a shame that she, who was naturally so pretty, should spoil her good looks by the wild garments she wore. Ringing of the telephone bell broke into the train of her thoughts.

"Who was it?" she inquired of her husband as he returned from the instrument.

"It was my old classmate, Bradley," he replied. "He's going to Mexico on business for three months—all summer—and he wants to send his boy here to visit us. Of course, I couldn't say no; but I don't want a wild youngster around here. Molly and her crowd are enough to drive anyone crazy without another youth to help keep the ball rolling."

"But you asked him to come."

"Of course. What could I do? I hope he won't be too much of a bore."

But three days later, when young Harry Bradley arrived at the Hancock residence, Mr. Hancock was forced to make a grudging retraction of some of his hard words. The newcomer was a tall, good-looking youth, with a pair of eyes that had a habit of looking straight at one in such a manner as to create a favorable impression at once. Molly herself welcomed him enthusiastically.

"Oh, we'll have a peach of a time this summer!" she cried. "I'll introduce you to the crowd—we have the best times here! You'll like it—and they'll like you. We need some new men, anyway—"

Stephen Hancock snorted at his daughter's words, and did not notice the strange lack of enthusiasm in his visitor.

Two months of the summer passed. Molly seemed as usual, and her crowd carried on their various activities much as before. Dances, teas, luncheons at the Country club, long motor rides by moonlight—the hundred and one useless amusements of a group of young folk who are bored with life and afraid to admit it.

But one evening Molly announced at dinner that she was going to bed early. This was so unusual as to call forth inquiries from her father, and when pressed said that she and Bradley had been for a walk in the country. Bradley smilingly admitted his complicity; more than that Molly's father and mother could not discover.

But after Molly had retired, Mr. Hancock said to his wife: "That's the first really sensible thing that she's done in years. I wonder what's got into her?" Mrs. Hancock said nothing in reply, but she smiled wisely.

Bradley's visit drew to a close. He was to leave in a week, his father having returned from Mexico and wanting his son to join him in his offices in New York. On the evening that marked the beginning of the last seven days of his stay Molly was called to the telephone. She had a long conversation and returned with color in her cheeks.

"The crowd's going out to a road house and wanted you and me to come along," she said to Bradley. "I told them I didn't think we'd go."

Bradley smiled. "Glad you did," he said. "Those parties bore me."

"They bore me, too," replied Molly. "Let's go out on the piazza."

The pair departed. Mr. Hancock stood in silent amazement for a moment; then he turned to his wife.

"Great Scott!" he ejaculated. "Did you hear that? Our Molly—Molly, who never missed a chance to go on a party—Molly, the worst thistledown of the bunch—turning down an invitation! What's happened?"

Mrs. Hancock laughed outright.

"Oh, Stephen, you haven't seen what's been going on right under your nose! That young man you didn't want to come has made Molly see life as it ought to be. He's a worker with a big job—his father's business—and life means more to him than parties and flirtations. And Molly's seen it, too. Come with me."

She led her mystified husband to a nook from where they could hear the pair on the piazza.

"It isn't fair to spy on them," she whispered, "but just this once—I want you to see what has happened to your little puff of thistledown."

Molly and Bradley were seated in the wide swing, with the moonlight streaming down on them. Bradley was speaking.

"I'll be leaving in a week," he said. "Oh, Molly, I long to get back—to be at my work. But there's something I want to know before I leave, Molly. I thought that you were just one of the wild girls of the younger crowd when I met you, but you're not—you're the most wonderful girl in the world, and I want to ask you to be my wife."

"Harry," Molly's voice was low. "I have a confession to make. When you came here I was just playing at life—just having a good time—a piece of thistledown, father said. But when I met you and saw that you were really doing something, really accomplishing something, I saw things as they were. And Harry, you've made me—"

Mrs. Hancock drew her husband away from the hiding place.

"Our little bit of thistledown has drifted to earth at last," he whispered.
